AUGUST 12, 1910, NORWAY, MAINE.

VOLUME XLII.

An Attempted Theft.

It was learned Tuesday afternoon that some person or persons had entered the house of George Thompson on Maple street, Monday night, with the intent to break open the safe.

Mr. Thompson, who is now visiting his brother, Edwin Thompson, in Haverhill, Mass., purchased a safe last fall which he keeps in his house. Some time Monday night evidently some one entered the house by means of the basement and went off leaving the doors open.

The neighbors noticed the doors open Tuesday morning but thought probably his mother-in-law, Mrs. Russell, was there, so paid no special attention until afternoon when some of the neighbors went in.

On the floor was the safe turned over and a variety of tools beside it. The bolts in the hinges had been removed but the safe was not opened. It is said by those acquainted with the owner that there is no money in the safe, merely some valuable papers.

Ernest Hutchins, the night policeman, was notified and kept watch Tuesday night in case the thieves returned.

Mrs. Lizzie Swett of Massachusetts is visiting at George L. Curtis.

Myrtle Blackwood of Cumberland Mills was the guest of Mrs. H. L. Trufant over Sunday.

Mildred Noyes and Frances Bartlett attended the camp meeting at Empire Road, Tuesday.

C. L. Hathaway is having the F. P. Stone block painted. George Pike is the painter.

Mrs. Edward P. Staples of Portland and Mrs. Alice Oxnard were recent guests of Mrs. Horace Oxnard.

Mrs. Lizzie Crooker and niece, Ruth Akers, who have been spending several weeks with relatives at Andover have returned home.

Charles Danforth and grandmother, Mrs. Laura Haskell returned Thursday from a few days visit with Mrs. Haskell's sister, Mrs. Charlotte Cummings at Albany.

Ruth Cummings, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Stephen Cummings were in Portland, Saturday where she commenced taking piano lessons of a Portland teacher.

The water in Lake Pennesseewassee is up to high water mark, an incident seldom known at this time of the year. During the recent showers the water rose a foot.

Mrs. Horace Oxnard has a large assortment of flowers around her house this summer. Among the most noticeable are some handsome pink hollyhocks, a variety not common around here.

Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Longley and three children went to Sanbornville, N. H., Saturday morning in their automobile.

A family reunion was held on the Sibley farm. In going they went by the way of Bridgton and Cornish and returned through Conway, Fryeburg and Lovell.

Harriette E. Cragin has accepted a fine position as teacher in the third grade at Rockland, Mass., with a salary of $550 the first year and the promise of increase.

Miss Cragin was chosen from eleven applicants and her salary is an advance of $50 over what has ever been paid the principal of this school.

The farmer who owns a farm is the particular person who is fixed. Banks may fail and factories close, workmen strike and mines suspend, merchants fail and town burn, times may be panic and even crops may be short—but the farmer who owns his acres will get along. He will live in comfort and quiet, with plenty to eat, drink and wear. He is the most independent man on earth. Yet there are lots of them who do not appreciate their situation.

Toney Young, care taker at B. F. Bradbury's, presented the ADVERTISER with a handsome bouquet of dahlias, freshly picked from his garden at the rear of the Bradbury residence. Mr. Young has one of the best gardens about here. It is laid out in triangles, squares and oblong beds with walks between, and contains a large variety of flowers, including the more common and also the rarer varieties. Along the edge beside the brook is a row of dahlias which contain all colors and kinds.

M. M. Fuller and Horace Mixer, carpenters and contractors, commenced on Wednesday morning to take out the hay scales front of the J. O. Crooker store. These scales were put in more than 20 years ago and for many years were in good use, but for the last few years as Mr. Crooker has gone out of the coal business, they have been used but little, and the wood work needing repairs Mr. Crooker concluded to take them out. W. E. Perkins with his team is filling up the hole.

Central Park Casino which has 12 new seats, accommodating four each, was filled to the door Saturday night the largest crowd handled thus far at Central Park Casino. Several strong subjects in the Motion Picture line were introduced with plenty of comedy. Benj. Millett sang two illustrated songs with Marjorie Locke at the piano. A good crowd remained for dancing until a late hour with music furnished by Briggs & Shaw.

George Cummings and family have been spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Barnes and family at Cundy's Harbor.

The Swastika club met with Lottie Lovejoy, Thursday evening, and will meet with Lena Schenk this Thursday evening.

Margaret Baker is having a two weeks vacation which she will spend at the Hotel Tucker of Avon, Mass., and Miss E. M. White, D. of Utica, N. Y., visited at Walter Hobbs, Monday.

Roy E. Fischer and H. H. Richardson of Lynn, Leo E. Kane of Boston, N. H., and Fred Douding of Providence, are the guests of W. C. Hobbs at Maplecroft.

They Went A Blueberrying.

One Who Was There.

Mr. Editor: Just a few lines about blueberrying on Durgin Mountain. You see it was this way, and if it hadn't been you would not have heard any thing about it.

You see I can't resist temptation worth a cent and when some mischief making person sent word down here, that they were so thick on Durgin mountain that all you had to do was to get onto the mountain with your pals, set them down there pick them up and they would be all full ready for you to go down and empty.

Well, that story got me, and it got me hard, but thanks to the Lord I was not the only one. Yes, Sir, there are others, three in number and perhaps I will tell you their names later on, but don't let on that I told you for it might make a little trouble for me, and I don't need it a little bit. No, Sir, I could get a long the rest of my life if there was not a drop of trouble in it.

I started in to tell about blueberrying. Yes, that story I struck four or five, hard that we all got blundered for the worst kind. So we hustled around and got ready to start Friday night. Now that was all right if we had started at seven o'clock as we intended, but there was a hitch in the program. Three of us were all ready at the appointed time, but that fourth one.

Say, did you ever start to go anywhere with anyone that was so slow that the gait of a snail would seem like going a two minute clip? That is it. If you have you know just how we felt. I suppose I might tell you, but it might be too strong for the paper.

Well, I had got everything handy, so when they did come along they would not have to wait for me. I had given up all hopes of going and was just getting ready to go to bed, when, some one said the team was coming. All was bustle and bustle and I don't feel a bit to blame for going and leaving just a few things, that we wanted to carry.

When we did get started it was fifteen minutes of eight, with 24 miles of road before us, a mighty dark night and not the sweetest of tempers, but the tempers did not last long.

I am not going to bore you with all the trials and troubles, hopes and fears that assailed us on the way, but we got there at last and it was only 25 minutes of one. We took care of the team and going into what was once a house, we found some bean fodder. No, we didn't eat that for we had grub enough, but we did pile down on it and slept till I asked Will Flint if he knew what time I called him.

Having seen to the horses, got breakfast we started to climb Durgin mountain and it was climb, climb, climb and then some more. Blueberries, yes, there were some and I should think they might have been plenty some time, but the good people of Stonham had been there before us, not in pairs or fours, but by the hundred I should say.

We made out to get better than three bushels and a half by working hard and called it off.

I don't mean to tell you what a fine mess of trout we had for breakfast, Sunday morning. Walter Morgan and Will Flint were to blame for that, but Charles Morgan was to blame for he and I beating at sixty-three, Saturday night. We all had a good time, and at two o'clock or there about started for home.

There I went and done it as I knew I would, called their names. But I didn't tell who it was that tried to cheat me out of the pay for the oats I bought for the horses and I ain't going to, for to tell you the truth about it I think too much of Walter for that, and I think he is honest, now don't you.

Blacksmith's National Holiday.

Next Saturday, August 13th, is the Blacksmith's National Holiday and will be observed all over the country.

There will be a picnic at Gibson's Grove for the blacksmiths and their families in this vicinity, Saturday and a good time is being planned for. The blacksmiths from the following towns are expected to be present, Norway, South Paris, Oxford, Buckfield, Bridgton, Harrison and Mechanic Falls.

Eula Bicknell, who has been spending the past month with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Bicknell at Brookton, Mass., returned home Thursday.

Mrs. Virgie Howe Trube, formerly of Fryeburg, has been in Portland for a short time visiting relatives. She will pass some time with relatives in Fryeburg.

It will be necessary for all exhibits to arrive sometime during the first day of the fair in order that proper care can be given for scoring and displaying the same.

The Norway team played the South Paris team on the High School grounds, at South Paris, Saturday afternoon, which resulted in a score of 7 to 6, in favor of South Paris.

The Central Maine Fair at Waterville, opening Aug. 30th, and the Maine State Fair, Lewiston, beginning Sept. 6th, are making a special effort to secure a large exhibit of dairy products.

Harry Morse's base ball team went to Harrison, Saturday afternoon, and played the Harrison team. The game was an interesting one up to the eighth inning when a few errors occurred. The score was 5 to 2 in favor of the Harrison team.

Is there any earthly reason why a farmer could not raise sweet corn and field corn both? The sweet corn to sell to the factory and the field corn to feed to his stock. If there is a good reason we would be glad to publish it. Is there any reason why he could not raise oats to feed with the field corn to his horses?

Of course if you are contemplating going to school this fall you are thinking and planning for it now, and that is right. It is none too soon to begin to make arrangements and to cast about for a desirable place. We gladly refer you to our school. No town in the State has a higher moral tone and fewer objectionable features. Our school offers unusual facilities for a proper culture of the mind at a very moderate expense, and you are very cordially invited to investigate before deciding to go elsewhere.

Pull together, brethren. We are all here for the same purpose. Then live and let live. The best way to build up a town is for each and every man to pull together and not strive to rend and tear down. All the residents of a town are partners, not opponents. In all likelihood the more business done by your kind people of Stonham will do. Every merchant who treats his customers honestly and fairly will get his share and the more business that can be secured by united effort, the better it will be for all.

George T. Tubbs is at Portland for medical treatment.

All the newspapers are agreed on one point—the political situation is looking fine.

Day of the Bungalow.
The day of the bungalow is at hand. These houses, some of them tiny and others large enough to accommodate the largest families, are springing up everywhere, but more especially in the country villages where many people spend the summer. The bungalows are mainly used as summer homes, but they are also arranged to accommodate the family during the entire year, winter and summer alike. They are probably the cheapest houses that can be erected, costing from $1,500 to $10,000, yet they can always be arranged in a pretty and attractive way, entirely at the pleasure of the builders.
One of the features of the present-day bungalow is the fireplace. This idea comes from our forefathers, of course; but it makes the little home one of the daintiest places imaginable, especially if the old-fashioned fireplace is built exactly with the old-time idea of planes. The fireplace also presents a more serious problem than any other section of the bungalow. It must be considered from the outside of the house as well as from the inside. It requires careful study and attention as to the possibility of drafts, and is likely to be criticised if it is not located in exactly the proper place. The three things most necessary to consider in the fireplace are the design, position in the room and material used. There is an advantage to the corner fireplace in the bedroom and reception-room.
The hall fireplace is one of the simplest and oldest types. It is wide opening and rough arched. It has a commodious hearth, is deeply recessed and has a heavy shelf. In the old days the fireplace was used for cooking, and other things about the household, but now those uses are gone and it is chiefly an ornamental affair.
It is more effective when grouped with other architectural features. The benches on the sides are very effective, giving a unit to appear to be one entity. The benches should be placed at right angles. Another thing to remember is that they should not be placed too close to the fire, for in such a case the occupant of the bench would find the heat almost unbearable.
The bungalow was first constructed in India. The word itself can be called Anglo-Indian, meaning a sort of rural home, with rooms on one floor and with a wide porch surrounding the greater part of the house. The original bungalow had all of the living-rooms on the first floor, but now they are being constructed with an upper story, or attic, where one or two rooms can be fitted up for the convenience of the occupants. These one or two rooms on the upper floor are generally bedrooms, that is, if the roof is not too high, and the attic is sloped effect. In the country where the bungalow originated there are all sorts of the houses, from the humble dwelling of the common laborer to the palatial dwellings of the wealthy.
Often they are erected in the center of spacious yards, upon which the bed-rooms look. They are built especially for warm weather use, and the bedrooms can be arranged so that they will get the greater part of the air. If they are to be occupied all the year around they should be built in a temperate way, in order that they can be easily heated.
The first bungalows adopted in this country were built in California. Architects realized the fact that there was a need for that sort of dwelling, the large houses being almost everywhere during the heated months. Thus they solved the problem with the dainty little houses, which are attractive from every point of view. Then the idea spread to all parts of the country, and Eastern architects taking up the plan and elaborating on the original plan, until now the bungalow stands for all that is comfortable in the summer home.
The bungalow can be called an effort to get back to nature—to give more harmony in the home and its surroundings. The little house may have a low, sweeping roof that joins the suspended covering for the porch. Or the roof may be of a different style, supported by large colonial columns. Many architects who have made a specialty of building bungalows have traveled throughout the country as well as in Mexico, for ideas, and each season brings some new things in the construction of the pretty little homes.
It is a mistake to think that the bungalow must be erected on a large tract of land. Such is not the case, as a small amount of space near a city will easily accommodate the building. There is always a market for such a home, where the plain house would find no sale.
On account of their low prices many persons who had been unable to build their own homes were allowed to visit the architect. It has even been proved that a bungalow can be built for $500, although this will not pay for a very substantial affair. In the summer, when a large house is not needed and the thought is to keep cool, the cheap bungalow answers the purpose very well. Stained wood or shingles often appear as attractive as concrete or stone and it is all a matter of taste to the builder.

Dr. Francis Clark tells an interesting story of youth living in Maine who was out in the woods one day during his vacation with a camera taking photographs of attractive bits of scenery. He came upon the mouth of a little cavern between the rocks, and he said to himself, "I will see what sort of a picture I can get out of that cave," and as it was a dark day he decided to take a "time exposure" instead of a "snap shot." Steadying the camera upon his knee as well as he could at the edge of the cave, he gave the sensitive plate a long, deliberate look at the semi-darkness within. Then he continued his tramp through the woods, and after a few hours returned to his camp.
Several weeks afterward, when developing his plates, you can imagine his astonishment to see in the picture, in the very centre of the cavern, with arched back and bristling fur, and with in springing distance of the spot where he had balanced his camera, a huge Canada lynx, that might easily have torn his eyes out or destroyed his life. And yet he came and went and saw no signs of danger.—(The Christian Herald.)

THE RIGHT TO WORK.
A decision of interest to labor unions is that which Judge Richardson recently gave in a equity session of the general court in Boston. It was, in effect, that any man may work for whom he pleases and at whatever wage he likes.
Judge Richardson said it made no difference what the strike was for. "No labor organization has got a right," he said, "to prevent a man from working. An employer is not obliged to treat with a union." Counsel for the defense acquiesced in the proposition that the defendants had no right to interfere with a man under contract, but they insisted to go farther, and that and hold that it made no difference whether a man was under contract or not.

Moving Pictures.
One of the queerest of uses for moving pictures has come to light through the work of a North Dakota man. This fellow, who owned several mines in the above state, did not have the capital to make some necessary improvements at his mines. He attempted to get wealthy men to invest in the property, but without success. He decided to go to London for his money, but knew that the English investors were skeptical about putting their money into something they had never seen.
Therefore the mine owner employed a moving picture outfit and films were made showing the work that was going on in the mines. Scenes of the men at work were made, and these were taken to England, where wealthy capitalists became interested. The originator of the idea was enabled to get enough money to make the necessary repairs.

The dates for the annual camp meetings at Mechanic Falls Advent grounds have been arranged for August 18th to the 20th. The program for the meeting is being arranged. A big attendance is expected.
The report comes from Washington that the postmaster general will soon urge the administration to include all postmasters of the second and third classes, with salaries from $1000 to $2500 per year, in the classified service, which means making them permanent officials and not subject to removal every four years, as at present. The adoption of this plan would do considerable damage to the "machine" of every congressman, by taking from him the distribution of the bulk of the patronage which has heretofore been at his disposal, but it is an open question if the average congressman does not make as many enemies as friends, through contacts for postmasterhip.

Putting Money In Clothes

A Clearance sale is a good place to lay in supplies. Putting your money into the clothes we are offering now at special prices is just as good a place as you can find for it. The difference between present prices and what the clothes sell for regularly is a bigger rate of interest than you can get in other ways. Even if you are stocked up pretty well it will pay you to add a summer weight suit to your wardrobe. The amount you will have to pay is very small compared to the months of satisfaction you'll get out of the clothes. We are able to fit your taste in fabrics and style; the sooner you come the easier this will be.

Live up to Position.

The Montreal Star says:—One result of the increased pay granted conductors and trainmen is that in the future they will have to present a cleaner and smarter appearance than in the past, both on the Grand Trunk and on the Canadian Pacific. The increase of pay on the Canadian Pacific was immediately followed by strict orders as to the appearance and conduct of the conductors. A clean shave, a clean collar, freshly brushed and ironed uniforms, clean hands and finger balls, a gentlemanly appearance generally, and above all, polite conduct towards the passengers, are some of the requisites of the conductor of today. It is the same on the Grand Trunk. Orders have been issued that "now that the men are getting the pay of professional men" they will be expected to live up to the position they occupy in dress and appearance, and among other things must not in the future wear celluloid collars—"one of the horrors of railroad service."

HARTFORD.

A Seven Foot Gully. Thursday, the 4th, there were thunder showers beginning at midnight continuing through the day. About five o'clock there seemed to be a flood-burst in the vicinity of Robinson hill, which had been put in excellent shape, the best for many years. It is now impassable, gullied in places from three to seven feet deep, running over stone walls in several places.

The road is in this condition for sixty rods or more. It will cost a large sum to repair it. While the shower was severe over a large territory, we hear of no other washouts but what were repaired in a short time.

Maine at Louisburg in 1745. A book written by Henry S. Burleigh, D. D., State Historian, and published at Augusta, 1901, by Burleigh & Flynt. It is said that "Maine, then a part of Massachusetts, furnished full one-third of the Massachusetts contingent." Maine furnished the commander of the expedition, Lieut. Gen. Pepperrell.

There are in the book ascertainable lists of officers and men from what is now the State of Maine, who were with Pepperrell of Louisburg in the correspondence, official reports, important source of information concerning Louisburg; its siege and capture.

The book is illustrated with a picture of Lieut. General William Pepperrell, map of Cape Breton, Louisburg in 1745, Siege of Louisburg in 1745. The King's Boston as it appears today, entrance to the Harbor, Island Battery on the left and Green Island on the right. Part of magazine uncovered. The Pepperrell Mansion at Kittery. A Big Rain Storm.

"The most rain which has been known to fall, within the last 40 years, inside of 24 hours, was 4 1/2 inches," says George Brooks, "but the storm of Thursday, last, that for in 24 hours 6 3/4 inches fell." The rain began with a terrific thunder shower about midnight, Wednesday night, and continued by spells till into the night, Thursday. The rain which fell with the showers came down in torrents, flooding the streets and causing a great many houses to leak. It looks as if the drought which had been threatening had been broken.

SOUTH PARIS.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Park. Among Oxford county there are few better known than Mr. and Mrs. Albert Park. The good this family does cannot be measured in words, for they have for years been bringing Cuban boys into Maine, educating them and fitting them for life in the business world. More than one of 'his boys' have been placed in position of trust, where their labors are useful.

The Parks have gone about their original method of educating these Cuban boys without show or demonstration. Mrs. Park taught over 30 terms of school. Mr. Park has for years been the clerk of probate. He also is an auctioneer.

A. D. Park was born in Dixfield and is the son of Henry W. and Eleanor Park, natives of that town. His parents moved to Mexico when he was a child and he attended the public schools there. From the latter place he went to Hebron. His class was first to have regular graduation exercises.

In 1878 he entered Bates. In 1879 he was married to Emma E. daughter of Leard Robinson of Sumner and went to Presque Isle, where they lived three years. After that Mr. Park taught at the Dixfield high school three years and a year at Mexico and later at Hartford, Sumner, Livermore Falls, Harrington and terms in the Maine district school. Mrs. Park assisted him in many schools.

Mr. and Mrs. Park attended Bridgton academy and she was assistant at Bridgton and Hebron.

Mr. Park is a Mason, a member of Paris lodge, an Odd Fellow, Mystic Tie of Presque Isle; the Oxford chapter; Oxford council; Oxford lodge of Ark. Martens and the Hamlin lodge K. of P., South Paris. He is a granger and has been a member of the Irish tile order of Good Templars for over 17 years; is a past master Mason; past grand Odd Fellow; has held office of lecturer in the grange; is past chief of Good Templars of Oxford county and has been supervisor of schools in Mexico, Dixfield and Hartford.

Good Demand for Men.

The first men for the seasons of 1910-11 are being sent into the spruce woods and from now on the demand for woodsmen will be steady. No man in Maine who is able to work and who wants to, need suffer for the lack of employment. Better in this respect, at least, the State is better off than most others in the Union.

The men who are now going into the woods will be busy until September in swamping roads and building camps and making ready for the coming season. The lumber crews themselves will not start in until that month.

Most of them will go into the woods between the 1st and 15th of the month. Owing to the extremely low price of spruce lumber there is some uncertainty at present as to the size of the cut in Maine next winter. It is doubtful, so it was said recently, if it comes up to last season's total. Nevertheless, many concerns are already planning their campaigns, have already picked out the sites of their camps and have commenced building them.

Although woodsmen are a trifle scarce just at present there will be no lack of them later on. The supply, so the employment agents say, will be fully equal to the demand. As the summer progresses many men come into the city from odd jobs in the surrounding country.

One feature of the labor situation will be welcome news to the average operator. It is likely that most of the crews will be made up of Maine and New Brunswick woodsmen who are considered the best that can be obtained. The situation last season was different. An unusually large number of men were sent into the woods and some of the camps had to be content with what they could get.

Most of the hemlock bark crews have finished now and some of them have commenced yarding. The popular crews are also finishing their season's work. More men will be coming into the city every day now.

Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill held her annual reception at her summer home in South Chatham, N. H., Saturday afternoon, Aug. 5. Mrs. Hill has conducted a very successful School of Domestic Science during the past month.

Young Girls in Jail.

Deputy Sheriff H. L. Elliott of Rumford went to South Paris, Friday afternoon, with Eva Ranisshaw, about 19 years old, and Jennie Hibel, about 22 years old, who have been sentenced to jail for 30 days for larceny of clothing. About two weeks ago these young women went to Rumford from Lancaster, N. H., securing a room at the home of Mrs. Blair, while seeking work. Wednesday, the girls took the morning train away from town, rather suddenly, and when Mrs. Blair went to their room she found that clothing valued at between $30 and $40 belonging to Mrs. Pearl Howard, who lived upstairs, was gone. Deputy Elliott was acquainted with the facts and telephoned Portland officials, who arrested the girls on their arrival in Portland. Mr. Elliott went down and returned Thursday night with the girls. They pleaded guilty.

Maine Tourmalines.

Maine tourmalines and other semi-precious stones are gaining in value, this being due in a large measure to the perfection of cutting and polishing. Many of these stones are quite as brilliant as those of other countries, etc. The larger stones are used a great deal in pendants, often set in gold, but perhaps the blues and greens are more becomingly set in silver. Maine is known all over the country for its charms but its stones are only gaining a prominence, although those who possess one or more of these jewels value them for their beauty and old coloring.

The actions of mankind are the great cause for the decrease of the birds. Direct or deliberate killing has been lessened and largely prohibited. The failure to provide means to overcome. If the following directions are observed, colonies of the useful feathered residents will soon establish themselves:

1. Do not shoot them or permit them to be shot or frightened.
2. Erect nesting boxes. In these, ten or more species may nest.
3. Prohibit unusual noise around the premises during the nesting season, particularly while birds are selecting sites for nests.
4. Provide nesting material for use in constructing nests.
5. Put out trays of water and mud for robins, swallows, etc., to use in building.
6. Erect and preserve odd posts, stumps and logs with holes in them.
7. Suppress prowling cats and dogs.

If, as some of the reformers declare, there is no Sunday in Alaska, there will be many who will wonder when the residents get time to go fishing.

Art of Being Shabby.

One Woman Who Acquired a Reputation for Wealth.

"There are two ways of impressing people," said a woman who had known about the world a good deal. "You can be very smart or you can be distinctly shabby. For a woman of small means I recommend the second way and I can speak with some authority, since I have followed my theory for a long time."

"Before I adopted it myself I watched it in operation. I know an old lady of some means, but not rich, who lived in a good hotel. Everybody dressed rather respectably with some exceptions. She received more or less consideration from the management, but this old lady was the mogul of the place."

"She paid no more for her rooms than the others and she spent less in the dining room and I was at a loss to account for the fact that she commanded instant and implicit obedience, even in the most exacting requests, until one day when the hotel clerk, having seen me in conversation with her, said casually:

"You know she's awful rich."

"Oh, yes," said I. "I had no idea."

"Oh, yes, indeed. She goes around in those shabby clothes because she doesn't care, but she has several million dollars."

"It happened that after that I became quite intimate with the old lady and by reason of helping her with her affairs I acquired some notion of the principles of agriculture without including that science as a separate study in the curriculum. It is a novel task seems sometimes to be supposed."

A duodecimo volume of 230 pages, "The Farmer's School-Book," published here in Albany in 1837 by J. Orville Taylor, for the express purpose of facilitating what may be called incidental instruction in agriculture in connection with acquiring the art of reading aloud. "Children," says the preface, "may read and study in the school-room what they will practice when they become men. They now read the 'English Reader' or some other 'collection' that they do not understand or feel any interest in, and which, the worst of all, never gives them one useful idea for the practical business of life."

"This little work has been published to take the place of such useless, unimproving reading. Its object is to give children, while they are receiving their school education, a scientific, practical knowledge of the labors of manhood. The improvement of our schools, and the interests of agriculture have long been calling for such a work."

"The King of Sparta, being asked what things he thought most proper for boys to learn, answered, 'Those things which they expect to do when they are men.' The young farmer has not taken this advice. He has learned nothing of his profession while receiving his education."

Precisely the complaint, as the reader sees, that we hear to-day, and Mr. Taylor appears to have anticipated, in a way, one modern suggestion for meeting it. It is perhaps not worthy that one chapter of the book was written for it by "the Hon. Henry Clay of Kentucky."

Anyone with the will to do can learn to work, but very few learn how to really rest.

Sleeping is not always resting; neither is doing nothing a good form of rest. There are certain things that people do that are more fatiguing than hard work. Real rest presupposes sufficient sleep and enough of the loafing spirit to get off tension, but it means more than that. One of the surest rests is in relaxation; change of occupation is resting, so, also, is change of scene and view.

If you live in the city, especially if you are a worker, get into the country once a week. You can exercise or loaf, but you will come home stimulated. The country girl needs the excitement of a day in the city.

Many a woman has found going to the theatre the greatest rest she knows. This is particularly so for brain workers or for women given to worrying about their household duties.

Some girls make it a practice to keep a little knitting and a good book. This habit has discovered one of the secrets of keeping rested. An afternoon of sleep makes for sluggishness; totally different is five minutes' oblivion snatched when sitting upright in a rocking chair or stretched flat on your back.

Most restful of all is the power to let things go. One rarely hears of a woman getting nervous prostration who has the blessed faculty of sitting down to the midst of confusion to finish a good book, or of snatching a day for pure pleasure through duties press.

Influence of Personal Sympathy.

Personal sympathy is the basis of every human relation and influence. Feeling for one another, whether the richer or the poorer, a pleasant observance of the golden rule in the general intercourse of every day life adds appreciably to its ease and happiness.

Consideration for those less fortunately placed would seem to be a part of every one's mental and moral makeup and habitual attitude. But how often it is found to be lacking, and in unwanted places, too says Philadelphia Times.

Watch a woman shopping. How does she address the salesman or the saleswoman? Listen to a man or woman ordering a dinner. Do they use a cold and formal tone that has evidently been pitched with conscious care for the occasion or is there some of the more human and natural vibration to be heard in it?

Do they neglect or scorn to use that little word "please?"

Only those whose plebeian origin, ignorance, or want of cultivation have made the tone of their speech, only the hangers-on of the frayed-out fringe of the social fabric fear to be humanely pleasant to the humbler, or the poorer in this world's coin.

By their manners shall ye know them.

No New Idea.

In 1837.—The very sensible idea, that children in rural schools might readily acquire some notion of the principles of agriculture without including that science as a separate study in the curriculum, is a novel task seems sometimes to be supposed.

City of Open Air.

Far out from the man-made cities, from clamor and dust and glare, in the heart of old New England lies the city of open air. It has no date of building, for it grew when the world began. And the builder bidden to satisfy the heart of a coming man. Afar on the miles of sky-line I trace each tower and dome. Where the sparrows among their altars have built their youngling's home—Studio, gallery, temple and school of music and art. And the key of every building is hung in the children's hearts. There is ripple of laughing water in the lap of the mother hills, the flower, refreshed by the winding rills; The days of blue-domed wonder and the nights of unlit stars, And the dawn's dew flashing answer to the heliograph of Mars. A path winds out from the valley and quests a secret shrine. Somewhere hidden and waiting, in the cloisters of fir and pine. No need of human hands where the wind knows pipe and string. Nor chant of vested choir where the birds of woodland sing. Somehow the sins and follies of the heart are purged away. Somehow the dusk of doubting dissolves in the splendid day. Somehow the long-hung burden seems light as the song birds fly. And you kneel and know that your prayer is heard in the temple of open air. I love this vast wide city. Escaped from this world of men. The canonized streets that cross the sky—O, life! Do you ask, Where lies the city. Ah, I need not tell you where. For all the streets of Rome lead out to the city of open air.

When She Says No.

How to Take a Refusal of Marriage with a Smile. Incredible as it may seem, proposals of marriage are sometimes refused—usually because the lady thinks she knows better. To comfort oneself fittingly when rejected is no easy matter. The young beginner is advised to give some thought to his next move in the event of his proposal being declined. To stand staring in reproachful silence displays a lack of savoir faire, and incidentally, gives the lady a chance to change her mind. The really nice young man, when rejected, inclines to gloom; the average young man takes up an attitude of sprightliness. To display relief when rejected may not seem in the best taste, but if a girl has refused you, that is sufficient evidence that she has no taste at all. Let us consider the methods of the really nice young man. He hints at a broken heart—a picturesque but imprudent happening. He asks if there is no hope; always he speaks in "low tones"—there is the authority of the best fiction for this. Apparently he never shoots his quarry; he is content to let it depart. He mentions suicide in a noncommittal way, and eventually takes his leave "with one last fond, lingering look at her." One can only hope he does not spoil the dramatic value of his exit by tripping over the doorman. It seems to me that the really nice young man comes away from the interview as though he were George Washington caught stealing jam. By his humility he does much to destroy that idea of equality of the sexes, which men are striving so hard nowadays to maintain.

So much for the really nice young man. The average young man has a variety of methods for keeping his end up in the event of being rejected. He imparts an air of levity to the proceedings, which must be distinctly irritating when one is expecting time-honored references to fractured hearts and blighted hopes. Copying the average young man, you may, therefore, when rejected, laugh heartily, and then remark: "Well, but joking apart, isn't the weather beautiful?" There is something about this formula which prevents the waste of any emotion except annoyance. Another gambit in taking refusals is to smile with satisfaction, and say the simple word: "I win!" While the damsel is puzzling out what the words may mean, you can effect your escape. In the event of an emphatic refusal, you can always ask, smilingly: "How did you guess I was fooling?" An effective way to prevent a lady promising to be a sister to you is to get there first by promising to be a son to her. And you can follow it up by saying: "Oh, well, I must be getting along. I've got another call to make."

There is a subtlety about this remark which enables you to take your leave quite easily. "If you are generally surprised at your refusal, wait to the end of the interview until you have regained your normal spirits. Then you can turn round and invite her to see how fast the trees are growing. Always try, however, to be ready to say something at once. If after her "No," you think you have been silent too long, assume a puzzled look and say, "Let me see, what were we talking about?" Should the girl give reasons for refusing you, remark: "Yes, that's just what Jane Jones said last month when I proposed to her." It may happen that the lady answers your proposal thus: "No, Harold, I can never be yours. I am affianced to another."

The best thing to do to avoid exposure of your disappointment is to imitate the mode of your favorite low comedian and exclaim: "Oh, Gwendolen, give 'em over." This sort of thing precludes a heart-to-heart talk. Or, alternatively, you can say: "Yes, I knew that when I asked you." Another formula, when rejected, lies in taking a list of names from your pocket, consulting it and remarking: "You're Miss Susan Smith, aren't you?" Then you put a tick against the name, sigh relievedly, and take your leave. Some experts counsel the singing of "There are nice girls everywhere," but this always strikes me as showing a want of ingenuity. If you have come primed to say, "Thank you, Harriet, you have made me the happiest man in all the world," in answer to her acceptance, there is no reason why you shouldn't say in reply to her refusal. In the event of receiving a refusal by letter, pretend that you did not get it. This has a disquieting effect. Or, if you want to get even, wait till she questions you about it and then say, with every symptom of glad relief: "Oh, that letter was from you, was it? I couldn't quite make out the signature, and I thought it was from some one else on a similar matter."

Grain to Cows on Pasture.

The question of feeding dairy cows grain feed when they have the run of good pasture is receiving serious attention from many dairy farmers. Common farm practice shows that a limited quantity of grain feed will increase the flow of milk, but in most instances the yield will not be increased enough to pay the cost of the supplemental feed. When pastures are short, cows must have supplemental feeds.

If grass fails, either from drought or overgrazing, supplemental feeds must be supplied at once. A steady, well-sustained flow of milk can only be maintained on pasture when the grass is in an ideal condition. A milk flow allowed to diminish can seldom be fully regained until the cows again freshen.

It requires a keen sight to detect the first signs of a falling pasture. The common mistake of allowing the milk flow to diminish before supplying additional feed means serious losses. Early providing the supplemental feed by the change from grass to grain and forage is more gradual, and at the same time there is no serious loss in the flow of milk or condition. Even cows that are fed heavy rations of grain feed suffer a loss of milk and condition from short and dry pastures. It is a waste of grain feed to feed it to cows when their sole supply of roughage is a drought-stricken pasture.

On the average dairy farm it is not necessary to plan a complicated system of soiling crops for summer feeding. Such crops as corn, alfalfa, clover, and oats and peas are the very best to cut and feed green, and they are alike valuable when grown in the rotation for winter feed. The regular rotation crops and the best soiling crops are thus the same.

This fact has proved a stumbling block to many of the best dairy farmers. In trying to save feed for their cows during the winter, they have let dollars slip through their hands in losses in milk fields and condition. In keeping back hay, grain and ensilage for winter, it is usual to see herds of dairy cattle in July and August stamping dust and fighting flies, and vainly endeavoring to get through a fence that separates them from a field of luxuriant corn that flaunts its prodigious wealth of black-green forage. It belongs to a penny-wise and pound-foolish policy to permit cows to fall away in milk yield and flesh condition when a few loads of the rankly growing corn would keep them in good condition.

Feeding grain to cows that have flush feed in the pasture is a different matter. This problem has been tested at the West Virginia Station, at the Mississippi Station and at Cornell, and the results seem to show that unless dairy products are very high and grain feeds cheap it is not a profitable practice. While the cow gives more milk and maintains a better flesh condition when fed supplemental feeds, there is not sufficient direct profit from the use of such grain feed to return a profit. Country Gentleman.

How a Good Road Was Used.

"As soon as the automobilist had a good road and no dust they speeded their cars up to such a limit that they have torn the top of the solid road all to pieces and now for miles where there should have been a beautiful piece of highway it is in a awful condition. When the road was dusty they did not drive so fast."

"It has been figured that a motor car going at 25 miles per hour on a good piece of road does not greatly injure it, especially if it is oiled. Not satisfied with that fact clip which is the regulation limit for machines, the driver now 'lets her go' at forty and even forty-five miles when there is no one looking, or likelihood of being held up for over speeding."

"The result is that good roads built largely for their use are awfully abused by drivers and in some places destroyed. Warning signs that drivers exceeding 25 miles per hour would be prosecuted might be of avail in discouraging fast driving and have a salutary effect in prolonging the life of the road and perhaps the lives of those who use them."

Wedded the Dead.

Queer Marriage Ceremony That Was Performed in Japan.

The true ending of a Japanese love story is reported by the Japan Chronicle from Tzunuki, a little seaside village in the province of Shizuoka.

Oro Matsusaka, 20 years old, fell in love with Ono O-bun, a girl 17 years old. The young couple sought the consent of their parents and the father and mother of the girl refused to sanction the union. The two lovers decided to commit suicide rather than be separated. By appointment they met at a trysting place that had been the scene of their love-making and embarked in a fishing boat. At a point some distance from shore they bound themselves together with some cloth brought along to serve that purpose and threw themselves into the sea.

Committing "shinju," as lovers' suicides are called in Japan, is such an ordinary occurrence that little attention is attracted by it, but this tragedy was followed by something exceptional in Japan.

When the two bodies, still bound together, were washed ashore the officials who examined them turned them over to their respective parents. The villagers were so deeply affected that they called upon the bereaved families to "do justice" to the boy and girl by uniting them in marriage after death.

The mayor of the village was especially insistent that the rites be performed, "so that the deceased might be safely united in the next world." The parents agreed, the ceremony was carried out in due form, and presents were exchanged between the two families. The custom was legally registered just as if it had taken place before the deaths of the bride and bridegroom.

Lafoadio Hearn in his "Glimpses of Unfamiliar Japan" and "Gleanings in Europe—Japan" brought the attention of the Occident to any Japanese custom or occurrence stranger than this rare happening that finds its way into the columns of a Japanese newspaper as a feature of the day's news.

Kill the Germs.

That's the Only Way to Cure Dandruff and Parasitic Sage is the Only Killer.

Parasitic Sage soaks into the scalp, and when it reaches the roots of the hair, not only kills every germ, but it supplies the hair with just the right kind of nourishment to put vigor and strength into it and make it grow.

Parasitic Sage is the most delightful hair dressing in the world and is not sticky or greasy. Use it one week and you will never give it up.

Parasitic Sage is guaranteed by Frank Kimball, proprietor of the Noyes Drug Store, to stop falling hair; to cure dandruff; keep hair from fading; to stop itching of the scalp or money back. Price 50 cents a large bottle. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle.

Save Patent.

Quick work on the part of the Boston police saved Mr. Charles Murphy from losing a bag which he says contained a patent which he valued at $15,000. Locked in a room in Boston and checked his bag at the North station. Some time later his pocket was picked and he lost his check. The police arrested a man who gave his name as Charles Murphy. Piedmont as he attempted to claim the bag at the North station.

THERE are three different kinds of Ginger Ale:

Domestic, Imported and CLICQUOT CLUB

Those who have tried all three kinds, prefer Clicquot Club, because it lacks the burning sting in other ginger ales, caused by the red pepper, and because its quality and taste are undeniably superior.

Clicquot Club

(Pronounced "Klee-oh Club")

Ginger Ale

The best fresh ginger and the best sugar (not saccharine) are used in Clicquot Club. The water (Clicquot Spring water) is the best ginger ale water in the world; and the carbonating and bottling is perfect.

Clicquot Club Ginger Ale is non-astringent.

Other Clicquot beverages: BIRCH BEER, ROOT BEER, SASSAPARILLA, BLOOD ORANGE and LEMON SODA. Sold by the best grocers.

Fire at Kellogg Camp.
Fire broke out in the Kellogg camp owned by Mrs. Emily Kellogg at 4 o'clock, Tuesday morning but as a result of the good work done by about 15 of the lodgers at the camp the blaze was extinguished with but little damage except to the camp. The fire started in the building used as a kitchen and dining room and while the cause is not known it is believed that matches may have been dropped and thus set the fire which muffled away during the night and broke into flames early in the morning.

One or two of the camps nearby caught from the sparks of the burning camp but the fires were put out with little damage to them.

The loss to the burned camp is about $3000 and is partially covered by insurance.

BRYANT POND.

Castles in the Air.
Sometimes it is well for the people of a little town like this to do a little building of air castles as it is necessary to have castles in the air before we can have them on the ground. It might be well to look over some of the needs of the town in order that they may be attended to as early as possible.

Bryant Pond certainly needs some new sidewalks. The old plank sidewalks, which have been laid down, are of no use and when a new walk is laid as must be done in a few years, why not build a permanent walk of concrete. It would cost more at first but it will last it would stand for years and add to the appearance of the street.

It is to be hoped that some time arrangements can be made with the Grand Trunk so that the cars can be loaded at some other point than the common. Then it would be possible to set out trees and greatly improve the surrounding about the station.

The possibilities of the V. I. S. are unlimited and there is no reason, if the citizens will work together, why all these improvements cannot be brought about in time.

Allen Hathaway is working for George K. Coffin, haying.

Granville Abbott's folks are moving to North Woodstock.

The schools in Woodstock will commence Monday, Sept. 12th.

Roger Lappin visited his aunt, Mrs. Oscar Kimball at West Paris, Sunday.

J. E. Hathaway has taken his position as carrier on Route 2 after finishing his haying.

The recent rains washed the roads badly in many places throughout the town.

It is reported that Edwin Andrews will soon begin the erection of a blacksmith shop near the hotel lot.

Myrtle A. Bacon has returned from her visit in Norway and is visiting with her brother, Ralph M. Bacon.

Elverne E. Whitman has finished work for George Coffin and is cutting hay for himself on Fred Whitman's farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Martin and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wyman of Lynn, were guests at J. E. Hathaway's, Sunday.

The Grand Trunk have made a great improvement in the appearance of our station by putting on a new coat of paint.

Why not have the streets of Bryant Pond named? It would cost but little to have some suitable signs put up and would add much to the appearance of the village.

The public library seems to be much appreciated by people in town as many cards have been taken out. Two young boys in the Whitman district have made trips to the village several times in order to take out books.

The V. I. S. fair will begin Wednesday of this week and close with a grand ball Friday evening at the Opera House.

This live organization has accomplished much for the good of the village and the members have worked hard to make the fair a success. It is hoped that everyone in town, will if possible, patronize the fair at least one evening, for the money will be used for public purposes for the benefit of all.

Some of the summer visitors have departed, still there are more coming, some intending to stay through September.

Thursday evening a three act drama, The Old New Hampshire Home, will be presented at the V. I. S. fair. Stearns' orchestra will furnish music for the ball.

A crew of men under contractor Littlefield of Portland are breaking stone in the old quarry now owned by L. M. Rowe for the new church at South Paris. Only rough stone will be used in the building and it is estimated that forty car loads will be shipped from here. George Proctor of Paris Hill has taken the contract to haul and load the stone at the station.

HARRISON.

Public Library Association.
The history of this institution from its organization in 1908 to this time is one of the most interesting in the annals of the town. Since the completion of the fine library building early in 1908, the members and friends of the association have been anxiously considering the ways and means for relieving themselves of the incubus of debt incurred by them in the final stage of construction of the building.

This obligation for the sum of $1200 was in the form of a mortgage to the estate of George Burnham of Portland, which in July of this year amounted to more than $1800. Here the latest chapter in the chronicles of the association must be written; when Frank P. Bennett, as chairman of the trustees successfully negotiated the sale and transfer of said mortgage to the association for $610, less than half of the amount due for the original loan. Now, to close this chapter fittingly comes Daniel H. Caswell of Austin, Texas, a Harrison boy by parentage, an inventor, manufacturer and business man and philanthropist, an extensive owner of real estate in his native town, and was another link to the bond of grateful esteem existing for him in the hearts of the associated members and citizens by the gift of $810, a very helpful contribution toward the liquidation of the debt yet resting on the association.

A generous gift of $100 from Mrs. Arvilla Caswell Whitney, other sums from liberal friends and a fortunate balance in the treasury enables the association to extinguish the indebtedness on account of loan to the building fund. As a token of appreciation of the generosity of the principal benefactor, in donating sums at different times aggregating more than $2000, a testimonial of thanks signed by the officers and members of the association, thirty-nine in number, was sent to Mr. and Mrs. Daniel H. Caswell.
